Rainbow Wear

Cool, laid-back eco-friendly wardrobe starts with Kuyichi, a Netherlands-based ethical jeans brand working with organic cotton and stylish yet basic concepts. They take their name from the Peruvian god of the rainbow, who took all colours away from the world after becoming angry with the Tequila Indians, forcing them to work together to weave beautiful blankets and restore it. Inspired by the Indians' positivity and determination to restore colour to the world, the brand's plus sign in a circle logo represents positive forces (the plus sign), adding and giving something to the world (the circle).

And they certainly are making their mark. The brand approaches a younger crowd of urban fashionistas with chunky knits, vegetable tanned leather jackets, organic cotton flannel pieces and bamboo mix shirts, as well as casual loose and fitted basics for everyday chilling. And the code on the hangtag of your purchase lets you find out the story of its making which always starts and ends ethically, positively and fair.

Treat Your Feet

Beyond Skin is back again with a new collection that's totally fresh, stylish and funky, ranging from trendy lace-up brogues to gorgeous strappy party heels, simplistic office footwear, winter boots and their latest collection of playfully patterned ballet flats made in India by an IFAT accredited factory.

Beyond Skin is constantly trying to do its part to instigate that much-needed change in the world, opting for cotton-backed polyurethane instead of PVC, polyesters rather than acid chemical-riddled viscose etc, overseeing and working closely with their global factories for fair and just labour and to reduce their carbon footprint.

They take eco-friendly fashion to another level, leaving behind the common notion that it's bland and replacing it with colourful and timeless basics full of sass and class, thus putting ethics and style side by side.

With such a varied collection of guilt-free footwear made with faux skins, organic hemp, cotton and patents, all your eco-conscious shoe fetishists out there are totally sorted. Next stop: clothes.
